

Bill of Rights - Simplified

Amendment I:

Freedom of Speech, Press, Religion, to Petition the Government, and to Peaceable Assemble

The government cannot make a law that gives a certain religion preference over other religions. This amendment also protects the rights of the people to peaceably assemble and political freedom of speech.

Amendment II:

Right to Keep and Bear Arms

The government needs a military and this amendment protects it. It also allows the citizens of the country to have guns, within reason.

Amendment III:

Quartering of Troops

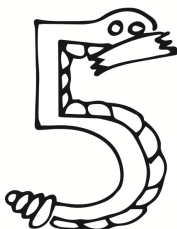

The government cannot make you house a soldier or take over your land in order to house troops.

Amendment IV:

Unreasonable Search and Seizure

Property cannot be seized without reasonable cause or suspicion.

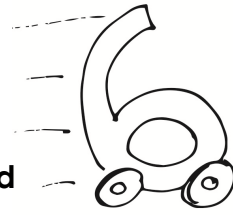

Amendment V:

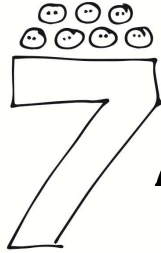

Due Process, Double Jeopardy, and Privacy

Citizens of the United States have a right to a trial with a jury. Amendment V also protects against "Double Jeopardy" which means you can't be tried for the same crime under the same charges twice.

Amendment VI: Rights of the Accused

Citizens have a right to a “speedy” trial. This also protects people against people being jailed without knowing what they are being charged with for an excessive amount of time.

Amendment VII:
Civil Right to a Jury

In civil criminal cases, those accused have a right to a jury of peers. However, this is not true in non-criminal matters and in the military.

Amendment VIII:
Cruel and Unusual Punishment and Excessive Bail

This amendment protects the people against cruel AND unusual punishment. Basically, the punishment must fit the crime. Bail for jail is also determined on a case-by-case basis; it should be a reasonable amount considering the charges.

Amendment IX: Protection of Rights

It is illegal for the US Government to alter or void the basic principles of people behind the Constitutional Rights.

Amendment X:
Powers of the State and People

Rights not included in the first 10 amendments will be determined by the State and the people.
